

CAN YOU REALLY SAY THERE'S ONLY ONE TRUE RELIGION?

Dave Irving: It's a bit of an understatement to say that Religion has become a sensitive topic in recent times. People are fearful of saying the wrong thing, and scared of arousing religious hatred. Also, I reckon that most Australians find arrogance hard to take. And what sounds more arrogant than, "I follow the one true religion"?

But I wonder if things could be different. I look back to my time in high school where I had a number of Muslim mates and we were actually able to disagree and still be friends. This was most obvious in our different thoughts about Jesus. Hammam and I both understood Jesus as an historical figure. But Hammam saw Jesus as a prophet whose message has been distorted by Christians.

Whereas I, as a Christian, believed that he is more than just a prophet, but God himself in person. In the end, when we spoke, we might have disagreed but we didn't feel threatened and we weren't arrogant about it. We both learned a lot and counted each other as great friends.

The reality is that there was only one Jesus. So I wonder, if we began to engage with each other in a way characterised by humility and genuine care for one another, is there any reason that we couldn't seek the truth of religion together?

"Turn to me and be saved, all the ends of the earth! For I am God, and there is no other."
